58 ▼ Virginia is the only state in the country where you can, and will, get a speeding for going even 1mph over the posted limit.

14 ▼ Move to California. You'll never get pulled over even if you're driving like Dale Earnhardt with expired registration. And if you do get pulled over and get a ticket you just say you aren't a citizen. Then they won't write you a ticket. But they have to still let you go. It's almost like a free pass.

3 ▼ Haha I lived in Los Angeles county over 3 decades. I've been driving about 20. It has always been kinda nuts on the road compared to other places which drive like they're in no hurry. They pull over to let you pass in other places. Every fast lane in SoCal freeways is half drivers doing 65mph. The other half trying to drive 85+.

Still the craziest place I've ever had the experience to drive a car was Manila in the Philippines. That place makes LA seem like nothing.

But surprisingly most people are not rude for how bad others drive. Everyone's smoking weed while they drive around to make the traffic more bearable. We used to keep joints hidden in the

My daily commute here in WV is 30 miles each way along the Ohio River. so it is fairly flat and straight compared to the rest of the state. I drive through one small town, but most of the time I can set my cruise control on 65 and let the lane assist do most of the driving. However, it is all two lane highway.

Sometimes I'll get stuck behind something slow and have to hope it is clear at the next passing zone. Tractors in the spring and fall are the worst. There's no passing a combine going 10 mph. You'll also encounter Amish buggies in my area too, but they mostly stick to back roads.

I know what I mean by those buggies. My mom's from amish country. But you should see the ,national road system of the Philippines. It's nuts. 2 lane highways one way both direction. People split into four lane. The tricycles and tuk tuks are the worst. They're everywhere and slow you down like farm equipment. But there's thousands of em. I don't mind going around a combine once in a while out in farm land. But it'd just dangerous specially when it's constantly pouring rain on a concrete ungraded road for drainage. It's so slippery. There's hundreds of fatalities every day there on the road. And no one has much regard for safety. you'll see families of four. Little kids hanging on the handle bars of the family scooter. It's just crazy. Like nothing in America.

I've lived in Virginia my whole life and have never been pulled over and I go about 8-10 mph over the limit, routinely. You saying they target out of staters?

MD here, VA definitely targets out-of-staters since it's harder for them to fight it and they don't want to piss off the locals.

VA is hardly the only state that targets out of towners. That happens in a lot of states.

I can vouch for that, I once got a ticket in PA for going 56 in a 55 zone. Had a rental car with out of state plates.

Virginian here. I have heard this more than enough to believe they do target out of staters. I will say for the white signs and slow down them.

But they're every quarter to half mile in many places. So might as well drive the speed limit.

Wyoming is like this too, I got a ticket traveling through there and had to go back for court. Everyone in court with me that day were all ticket for going anywhere from 1-3 miles over the limit. It sucked ass.

a speeding ticket for 10 mph over the limit in california is $300. pay a cop to hand out 10 tickets a day, and it is a cash cow to the government

If you get stopped, just tell the cops that you have no idea why your stopped and disagree with them saying you're speeding. The whole idea of police stopping a is to get you to confess, never confess!
